The Gifts of the Jews is a chart that opens up the route of Western history. It enables us to trace our cultural heritage back to its ultimate source – the religious ideas and sensibilities of ancient Israel. With this book Thomas Cahill has confirmed his position as a highly exciting and original writer of religious history.

'Cahill's book does a masterful job of depicting what the world looked like in ancient times… He has some simple yet fine insights into previously overlooked gems of the Bible.'
The Daily Telegraph

'Thomas Cahill has written an enthralling story in the history of ideas – the tale of how a new concept of time gave birth to hope. A beautifully written and important book.'
Jonathan Sacks, Chief Rabbi

'It is impossible not to experience a feel-good rush at his enthusiastic analysis of how vast a contribution the Jews have made to the world's knowledge.'
The Jewish Chronicle

'There's no taking away from Cahill's unrivalled flair as a populariser of what were, till he came along, the dustiest of scholarly questions.'
The Scotsman
