Children With a Star

Jewish Youth in Nazi Europe

Debórah Dwork

"Children With a Star is a book which must be read."—Peter Ackroyd, The Times

"What really happened to [Anne Frank] and to an entire generation of Jewish youth is contained in Dwork's Children With A Star. . . . If it sometimes seems as if there is nothing new to be said about the Holocaust, Dwork's book is a reminder that that's not the case. Astonishingly, it is the first scholarly study of children and the Holocaust."—Joel Yanofsky, Toronto Globe and Mail

"To view the Holocaust through the eyes of children is to see it for all its madness and injustice."—Anne Roiphe, Los Angeles Times Book Review

"[A] most striking new approach. . . . Scrupulously scholarly, yet eloquent and moving."—Henry Kisor, Chicago Sun-Times

"This book prises open doors which, for decades, have been bolted. [Dwork] has achieved what she set out to do with intelligence, compassion, and, it must be said, bravery."—Reva Klein, The Times Higher Education Supplement

"An excellent, well-researched book about how the war years affected children and childlife in all its guises and locales. . . . The book is fresh and compelling."—Sara Brzowsky, Lilith

"Dwork possesses the art of inducing [these survivors] to speak, just as she possesses the art of listening."—Elie Wiesel, New York Newsday

Debórah Dwork is an associate professor in the Child Study Center, Yale University, and a research associate in the Program in Judaic Studies.
